Politicians would insist that American ingenuity is the reason for American exceptionalism. They are, of course, lying. All it really takes to be exceptional is the belief that you are exceptional, everything else is just details. Fortunately for the subjects of tonite's episode (the members of InventorSpot and AHHHA) details aren't important. They have an idea. They haven't given it any thought, they won't give it any effort, and it's not a good idea in the first place, but they have an idea. This week, pay attention or it's the naughty chair again.
